Six years after his last album, José Ignacio Lapidó is back with a new one, A primera sangre. A long-awaited record with which 'el maestro' makes it clear, once again, why he is considered one of the most important creators of Spanish rock music. The composer from Granada has brought together eleven songs that somehow manage to illuminate those "secret corners of the soul" to which he already sang on another occasion; another step in his "search for the perfect song". Lapidó will offer a special and unique musical experience of authenticity, intimacy and direct connection with the audience.

On this occasion, Lapidó proposes an acoustic format with which to enjoy the nuances and expressiveness of his songs in a more personal manner. An honest approach and an attempt to make better songs each time, in which special attention is paid to all the details, and which captivate the audience as well as the specialised press. Music cooked over a slow fire, with lyrics that are profound, delicately crafted, small poems set to music, which are already a legacy for posterity. Not in vain, another of his
